Si tratta della copia digitale di un libro che per generazioni è stato conservata negli scaffali di una biblioteca prima di essere digitalizzato da Google nell'ambito del progetto volto a rendere disponibili online i libri di tutto il mondo.

Ha sopravvissuto abbastanza per non essere più protetto dai diritti di copyright e diventare di pubblico dominio. Un libro di pubblico dominio è un libro che non è mai stato protetto dal copyright o i cui termini legali di copyright sono scaduti. La classificazione di un libro come di pubblico dominio può variare da paese a paese. I libri di pubblico dominio sono l'anello di congiunzione con il passato, rappresentano un patrimonio storico, culturale e di conoscenza spesso difficile da scoprire.

Commenti, note e altre annotazioni a margine presenti nel volume originale compariranno in questo file, come testimonianza del lungo viaggio percorso dal libro, dall'editore originale alla biblioteca, per giungere fino a te.

"A DICTIONARY, Hindoostanee and English, originally compiled for his own private use by Capt. Joseph Taylor, revised and prepared for the press, with the assistance of learned natives in the College of Fort William, by W. Hunter, M.D.," was published at Calcutta in 1808: and, subsequent to the decease of those authors, when the publication above mentioned had become out of print and rarely to be procured, the first edition of this dictionary, founded on Dr. Hunter's, and intended to meet the urgent demands of the public both at home and in India, was passed through the press, at London, in 1817.

But, though a great part of the materials used in composing the first part of this work, was taken from the stock which Capt. Taylor and Dr. Hunter had collected, yet several alterations were made as well as many additions which cannot be attributed to those authors. Some few portions of their work were, for the sake of lessening the size of the book, omitted or abridged; a different method of denoting oriental vocal sounds by Roman letters was adopted; and additions of words, with the requisite explanations, were copiously made in the first edition, as well as in the following ones of 1820 and 1834.

In the last-mentioned or third edition, indeed, besides many proper Hindūstānī words, much was added relating to the Dakhnī; for, in India, extensive as it is, and peopled by many different races of men, variety must be expected to occur in the most prevalent colloquial dialect, so widely spread as the one here treated of, whether denominated urdū, zabān-i-urdū, rekhta, hindī, Hindūstānī, or Dakhnī; and words of common use in some parts may appear strange, or be even unintelligible, to the inhabitants of others. With the view, therefore, to increase the utility of the work, many words gathered from Dakhnī compositions were incorporated in the last preceding edition of this book; but, by unceasing attention to various Hindūstānī compositions, whether in prose or verse, whether in manuscript or in print, which have reached him from India, or which he has discovered, especially at the Library of the India House, since 1834, the author has been enabled to add to this fourth edition more than he had done to all the three preceding ones: and, among the various works from which words and phrases have been collected, may be here especially mentioned those of Walī, Mīr Takī, Saudā, Mīr Hasan, the ārā'ish-i-mahfil of Sher Alī Afsos, the akhlāk-i-Hindī, the ikhwānu-s-safā, khirad-afroz, gul-i-bakāwalī, bāgh-o-bahār, nasr-i-benazīr, totā-kahānī, bāgh-i-urdū, ganj-i-khūbī, zubdatu-l-khiyāl, anwār-i-suhailī-dakhnī, "qanoon-e-islam" by Dr. Herklotz, a "Dictionary, English and Hindostany" by the late Dr. Harris of Madras, a "Dictionary of the Hindee Language" by the Rev. M. T. Adam, the "Dictionary in Hindee and English" by J. T. Thompson, the Supplement to the Glossary of Indian Terms by H. M. Elliot, the Prem-Sāgar, the Phūl-ban, the Gulshan-i-ishk, besides many other poetical and prose works either printed or manuscript, either in Hindūstānī or Dakhnī; but, from no other source has the author gathered so much additional matter as from what the late Dr. Harris of Madras had prepared in manuscript, apparently with the design, had he lived, of publishing a very extensive and accurate Dictionary of the Hindūstānī current in both Hindūstān and the Dakhan: the manuscripts left by him in several volumes, and now deposited in the India House Library, fully evincing the extent of his plan, the pains he had taken to make his work a complete and general book of reference for both dialects, as well as the important aid he had sought and obtained from learned natives in fixing the meanings of words. These remains, indeed, of the long-continued labours of one fully qualified, as Dr. Harris seems to have been, for the task he had assumed, afford especial cause of regret that he had not lived long enough to complete the undertaking he had so extensively designed and so well in part accomplished: it was, however, the good fortune of the writer of this to discover these manuscripts some years back; and after a careful investigation, for which much time has been required, very many useful words, with their meanings, have been transferred to the following sheets; in which, with the design of keeping down the bulkiness of the volume, smaller Roman types are now adopted than in the preceding editions.

Before the words herein explained, the initial Roman letter of the name of the language whence each appears to be derived, if known, is marked: thus, H. stands for Hindī or Hindūstānī, S. for Sanskrit, A. for Arabic, P. for Persian, T. for Turkish, G. for Greek, LAT. for Latin, HEB. for Hebrew, PORT. for Portuguese, TAM. for Tamul, TEL. for Telugu, MAL. for Malay, GUZ. for Guzarati, K. for the Karnāṭaka or Canarese, E. for English, and the like; but, where the derivation is unknown, U. is prefixed: and if the word has varied in form from the original or is doubtful as to derivation, a slanting or italic letter, or letters, is by way of discrimination generally adopted.

The names of various works from which extracts are here made, are often referred to by the names of the authors: thus, (Elliot) refers to the "Supplement," &c. by H. M. Elliot, Esq.: (Harris) to Dr. Harris's "Dictionary, English and Hindostany:" (Harris, MSS.) to Dr. Harris's Manuscripts above noticed: (Roeb.) to the late Capt. Thomas Roebuck's "Naval Dictionary:" (Wilson) to Professor H. H. Wilson's "Dictionary in Sanscrit and English:" but, (Qanoon-e-islam) is used in referring to the work so named, translated by Dr. Herklots: and the initial letters or abbreviations for the parts of speech, grammatical terms, and other purposes, are generally such as are common to dictionaries or as are well known: thus, s. or subst. for substantive; v. for verb; adj. for adjective; conj. for conjunction; adv. for adverb; part. for participle; pron. for pronoun; prep. for preposition; postpos. for postposition; interj. for interjection; m. for masculine; f. for feminine; a. for active; n. for neuter; trans. for transitive; intrans. for intransitive; poss. for possessive; sing. for singular; plur. for plural; caus. for causal; compar. for comparative; superl. for superlative; corrupt. for corruption; dimin. for diminutive; comp. for compound; compos. for composition; contract. for contraction; inflect. for inflection; met. for metonymically; fig. for figuratively; sign. for signification; r. for root; q. v. for quod vide, which see; q. d. for quasi dicas (?), as if you should say; i. q. for idem quod, the same as; (dakh.) for Dakhnī, &c.; and in the second part of the work, h. is frequently used as an abbreviation for honā, j for jānā, k. for karnā, and d. for denā; a short line, too, as —, is often adopted instead of the leading word in many articles of the second part.

In the third edition of this work, the place of a reversed Dictionary, or one English and Hindūstānī, was designed to be supplied by an Index of references to the numbers of the columns in the body of the work, where each word or phrase might be found with its corresponding Hindūstānī. This method may have the advantage, by reason of the variety of terms thus presented to the inquirer's consideration, of leading by comparison to the fittest word for the meaning sought; yet, in practice, it is thought by many to be too tedious for general convenience: in the English and Hindūstānī part of this edition, therefore, the most usual English words and many phrases, as well as various botanical and other scientific terms, will now be given, together with the Hindūstānī translation in Roman letters only; and, to facilitate the conversion, when required, of these letters into those commonly used by the people of India, the corresponding Arabic and Devanāgarī characters are detailed in the following table, along with particular descriptions of the manner in which they are to be pronounced: it may be premised, too, that the letters a, e, i, o, u are intended to represent the Italian powers of those vowels.

Heretofore, during many years, the late Dr. Gilchrist's "Dictionary, English and Hindoostanee," first printed in 1786, 1790, met that favourable reception from the public which it justly merited; and, the same work, greatly reduced in size however by the omission of the Persian characters, was edited anew under the joint care of Dr. Gilchrist and Capt. Roebuck, at Edinburgh, in 1810: D'Rozario, too, published at Calcutta, in 1837, a "Dictionary, English, Bangali and Hindustani," in the Roman character, on a less extensive scale, avoiding very many words which exist in Dr. Gilchrist's work (perhaps regarding them as doubtful or of questionable utility), introducing frequently more appropriate correspondent terms, and judiciously adopting periphrastic descriptions of the meanings of certain English words, to which no parallel simple terms were discovered in Hindūstānī. In the English and Hindūstānī part of the following work, the method pursued by neither of those authors has been strictly imitated; with the sole view, however, of keeping down the size of the book, the proper characters of the Hindūstānī are in that part omitted, the reading of the words being given in Roman letters only, as in the publications above mentioned, though not according to Dr. Gilchrist's system: by many, this omission of the proper characters may be considered a defect, which could hardly on any account have been admitted, had not the same words and phrases, written in the oriental way, been generally presented to the reader in the foregoing portion of the book. For the sake of brevity, moreover, reference by numbers will occasionally be made to the columns of the preceding part, when the oriental word itself would occupy too much room, or when some requisite information is to be found at the place referred to. As to the Hindūstānī words selected to answer to the English, they are often taken from the translations which Capt. Taylor, Dr. Hunter and others, by long attention to the language, found most suitable, and which are given in the first part of the work: due care, too, has been taken, not only to bring foremost to the reader's notice such words as seem best to correspond to the English, but to point out by parenthetical insertions the various senses in which many English words may be used, as well as to subjoin to each the most appropriate Hindūstānī.

A few additional words which have been discovered during the impression of the first part of the following work, will be found at the close of that part: and, it is hoped that, considering the impracticability of passing a work of this size and description through the press without any mistake or failure, the reader will regard with indulgence such errors or defects in the impression as may occur; and the corrections, apparently most needed, are as follows:—

↑ Alif is the first letter of the Arabic and Persian alphabets. At the beginning of Hindī words, denoted by the characters of these alphabets, | with the vowel fatha, written or more commonly understood, represents the Devanāgarī letter अ a; with kasr, the letter इ i; with zamm, the letter उ u; and with the sign madda ~, the letter आ ā: at the beginning of Hindī words, moreover, when | is followed immediately by ي, the two letters together, according to the vowel written or understood with |, stand for ई i ऐ e or औ ai; and when | is followed in like manner by و, these two letters together represent, according to the vowel used with |, either ऊ ū ओ o or औ au; but, in the middle or at the end of such words, | stands invariably for आ ā.

In the representation of numbers by the Arabic letters, | stands for one; whence it is used also as a symbol of the deity: it signifies, moreover, the first day of the week, or Sunday; and, in astronomical descriptions, the sign Taurus of the Zodiack. From its form, too, this letter is adopted to denote straightness; hence, also, a brave man. And, in allusion to its simple, unadorned, figure, it is sometimes used to mean naked.

In Arabic words, at the beginning, it may be the ال alif-i-tafzīl wa takṣīr, used to form adjectives in a comparative degree; as, افضل afṣal from فاضل fāṣil, احقر aḥqar from حقير ḥaqīr: and, with ل (lām) it may compose the article ال (al); in which case, if the word which it precedes is subsequent to another word in construction, this | termed وصلي waṣlī, conjunctive, is written only but not sounded. At the beginning or in the middle, it may be the ال جمع alif-i-jamʿ, sign of the plural number; as, in احكام aḥkām, رجال rijāl. In the middle, after the second radical letter, it may be adopted to form adjectives in the superlative degree; as, ظلام ẓallām from ظالم ẓālim. And, at the end, it may denote the accusative case of certain nouns, used as adverbs only in Hindustani; so, تخمینا takḥmīnā: or a plural form; as امرا umarā: or, it may be the ال تانیث alif-i-tāniṣ, sign of the feminine gender; which is either ممدودة mandūda, long, as in حمرا ḥamrā red; or مقصورة maqṣūra short, as in حبلى ḥubla, pregnant.

In Persian words, at the beginning, it may be the ال اصلي alif-i-aṣlī (radical alif), which is not liable to be dropped; as in اسب asp, انداختن andākhtan: or, it may be the ال وصلي alif-i-waṣlī, which is liable to be cut off; as in افسون afsūn, افشان afshān, which are also written and pronounced فسون fusūn, فشان fishān. In the middle, between two nouns, it denotes continuity, proximity, or conjunction; as, شباشب shab-ā-shab, سراپا sar-ā-pā, تگاپو tag-ā-pū: or, in the middle of a word, it seems in some cases redundant; as, ستمگار sitamgār for ستمگر sitamgar. And, at the end, it may be the ال ندا alif-i-nidā, sign of the vocative case; as, ساقیا sākiyā, O cup-bearer! شاها shāhā, O king! or, it may be used in an exclamation of disapprobation, praise or grief; as, بدا badā, how bad! خوشا khushā, how good! blessed! دريغا dareghā, what sorrow! alas! or, subjoined to adjectives, it may form abstract nouns; as, گرما garmā, heat, from گرم garm, hot.

In Hindi words, at the beginning, it may be زائد الف alif-i-zā'id, as in اچپل achpal, الولک alolak; and at the end, it may be used to form the diminutive of a noun; as, اڌيا a very small box, from ڌبي; or, adjectives from substantives; as, بيوکھا hungry, from بيوکھ. In dakhni, moreover, a or ā is sometimes, most commonly in verse, prefixed to a verb, especially to the substantive verb in the past or present tense; as, اٿيا a-thā, اهي a-hai, اکھاوين a-khāwen for کھاوين khāwen.

s. ا (for अ) a, A name of Vishnu: also, when prefixed to a word, it is an inseparable particle, signifying negation or privation; so, अधर्म adharma Injustice, from धर्म dharma Justice; अधन adana Poor, from धन dhan Wealth.

ب

ب be, called bā in Arabic, is the second letter of the Arabic and Persian alphabets: and, in the representation of Hindī words by the letters of these alphabets, it corresponds to the Nāgarī ब; or, with ṣ (he) subjoined, to भ. When used numerically, according to the ايجاد or arrangement of the Arabic alphabet to signify numbers, it stands for two; hence, it is used to denote the second day of the week, Monday; and, in astronomical calculations, the sign Gemini. By way of abbreviation, moreover, it is occasionally written for the month رجب rajab, of which word it is the final letter. At the middle or end of a word, this letter is sometimes changed to ف or م: as, زبان zafān for تب tab, A fever; زبان zabān, Language; غزب ghuzhb for غزم ghuzhm, A grape-stone. In Persian words, too, it is occasionally interchanged with و: and in such as are borrowed or derived from the Sanskrit, it is frequently substituted for the Nāgarī letter ब.

He is, from his father, called Jāmadagni: and, the deity descended in this form to destroy the Kshatriyas (or Chhātris) who were become tyrannical. Renukā, wife of Jamadagni, was interrupted in bringing water from the river by Kārtavīrjārjuna, a prince of the Kshatriyas, who was sporting in the water with his thousand wives; for which Parasurāma's father, Jamadagni, cursed him. The Kshatriya prince killed Jamadagni; and Jāmadagni vowed not to leave a Kshatriya on the face of the earth. He is reported to have extirpated them twenty one times; the women with child each time producing a new race: and, they say that there have been no Kshatriyas since; those so called being of spurious breed, or Varṇasankars.

ت te, in Arabic called tā, is the third letter of the Arabic and the fourth of the Persian alphabet. In the representation of Hindī words by the letters of these alphabets, it stands for the Nāgarī त or, with s (he) subjoined, for थ. When used numerically, it denotes 400, according to the abjad, or appropriation of the letters of the Arabic alphabet to represent numbers.

At the beginning of Arabic words, this letter is much used to form verbal nouns of various forms ; as, تعريف from عرف, تالم from الم, تاول from طول ; and, prefixed to a noun, it may be the القسم ta' denoting an oath ; as, تالله By God. At the end of words in that language, moreover, it may be the تانيث tanīth sign of the feminine gender ; as, ملكة A queen, from ملك A king : and, this termination may be adopted to restrict the noun to unity ; as, تمرة A single date, from تمر : or, it may be used in the formation of infinitives or verbal nouns ; as, مكافات from كفي : or, the superlative degree of some few adjectives ; as, علامة (changed in Hindustani to علامة) Very learned.

At the end of Persian words, ت may represent the pronoun of the second person singular : or it may be redundant ; as in بالت for بالش A pillow. In different parts of a word, it may be substituted for د (dāl) ; as, تنبوره for دنبوره A drum, زرتشت for زرتشت Zoroaster, کنید for کنیت Ye may do : and, it is also used for ج (jīm) ; as, تارات for تاراج Plunder. In some instances, too, ت suffers apocope ; as, راس for راست True, دشنام for دشنام (bad name) Abuse, دشمن for دشمن (bad heart) Enemy.

ث called ثا or ثاخذ is the fourth letter of the Arabic alphabet. It does not occur in words of Persian origin. Its sound, among the Arabs, is that of th, in the English word thin; but, the Persians and Indians give it the sound of s. In the appropriation of the letters of the Arabic alphabet to denote numbers, ث represents 500. When, moreover, Persian words are introduced into Arabic writings, this letter is sometimes used instead of ت or س; as, تهمورث for كيومرث, and تهمورس for طهمورث; and, in Arabic words the letter ي is sometimes substituted for ث; as ثالي for ثالث.

cary ; into ش as کاشی for کاجی Made of glass ; into ج as کاج for کاج ; and, arabistically, into ص as صین for چین China.

Called ḫay the seventh letter of the Arabic alphabet, is a guttural letter, uttered by compression of the top of the throat near the mouth. It has no corresponding sound in the English language, but is expressed by the Scottish pronunciation of gh in the word right. It seems to have the power of the Greek χ. Meninski says it is the ch of Poland, but pronounced somewhat more strongly. In numeration by the letters of the Arabic alphabet, it stands for 600. And in astronomy, it denotes the planet Mars.

Its permutations are 1. into ḥay as ḥay for ḥay A spear, straight, high. ḥay for ḥay A tree fit for firewood. 2. into ḥay as ḥay for ḥay An egg. 3. into ḥay as ḥay for ḥay name of a plant (Tribulus), a caltrop thrown in the road to prevent an enemy's ap- proach. It is substituted 1. for ḥay as ḥay for ḥay Meridian, manner, bitter plants rejected by cattle. 2. for ḥay as ḥay for ḥay A flint; ḥay for ḥay A multitude. In the conjugation of Persian verbs, ḥay of the preterite is changed in the aorist 1. into ḥay as ḥay from ḥay. 2. into ḥay as ḥay from ḥay. 3. into ḥay as ḥay from ḥay. In derivation ḥay appears to be sometimes put for ḥay; thus, ḥay A bow may be deduced from ḥay Bending.

د dāl called دال مهملة or دال غیر معجمة is the eighth letter of the Arabic, and the tenth of the Persian alphabet. In the representation of Hindī words by the letters of these alphabets, it denotes the Nāgarī द (da); or, with ṣ (he) subjoined ध (dha).

In the numerical application of the Arabic alphabet, د (dāl) stands for four; hence, in almanacks, it represents the fourth day of the week, Wednesday: it is, moreover, used in astronomy to denote the planet Mercury, or the sign Leo of the Zodiac.

This letter, in Persian, may be changed to ت (te); as, in بدتر for وتر Worse: or, when the next preceding letter is و, or ي, or is moveable by a short vowel, it may be converted to ذ (zāl); as استاذ for استاد A master, گنبد for گنبد A dome: (see Lumsden's Persian Gram. p. 24). And, in Arabic words of the measure افتعال, when د, ذ, or ز is the first letter of the root, د (dāl) is substituted for the servile ت (te); as, in ازدحام from زحم.
